

Shaping the Future of Care and Support in Devon

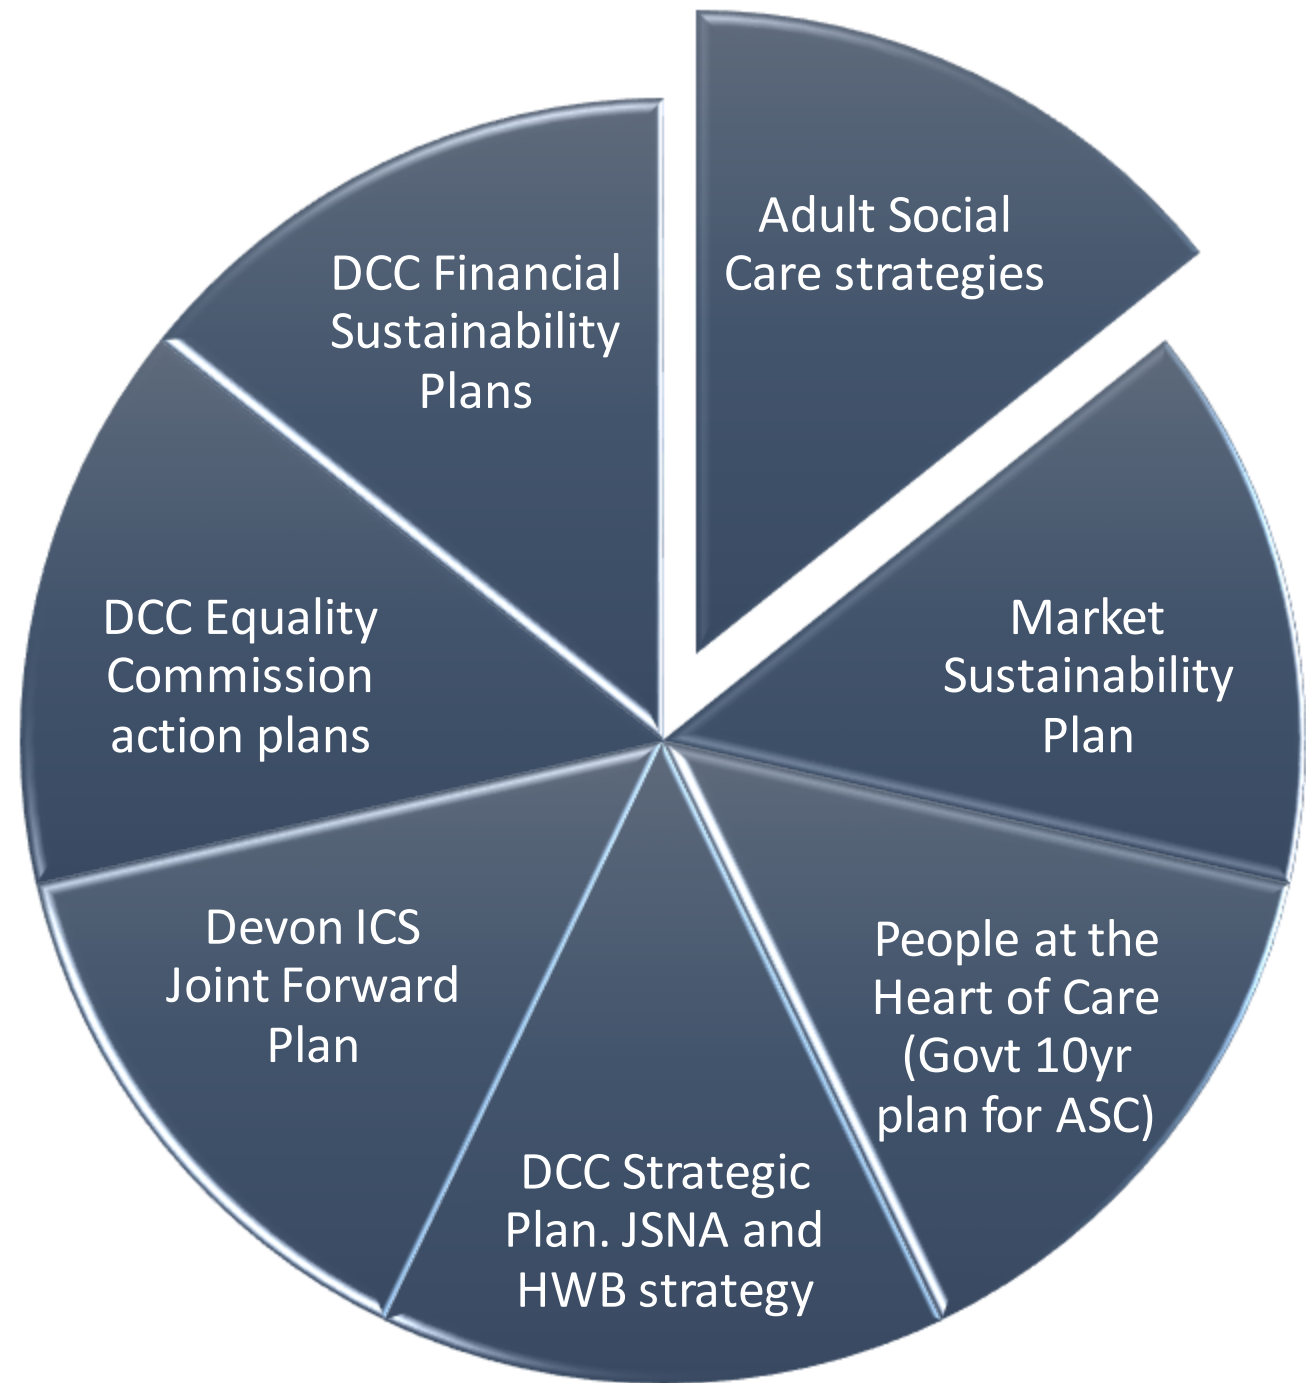

Solveig Wright

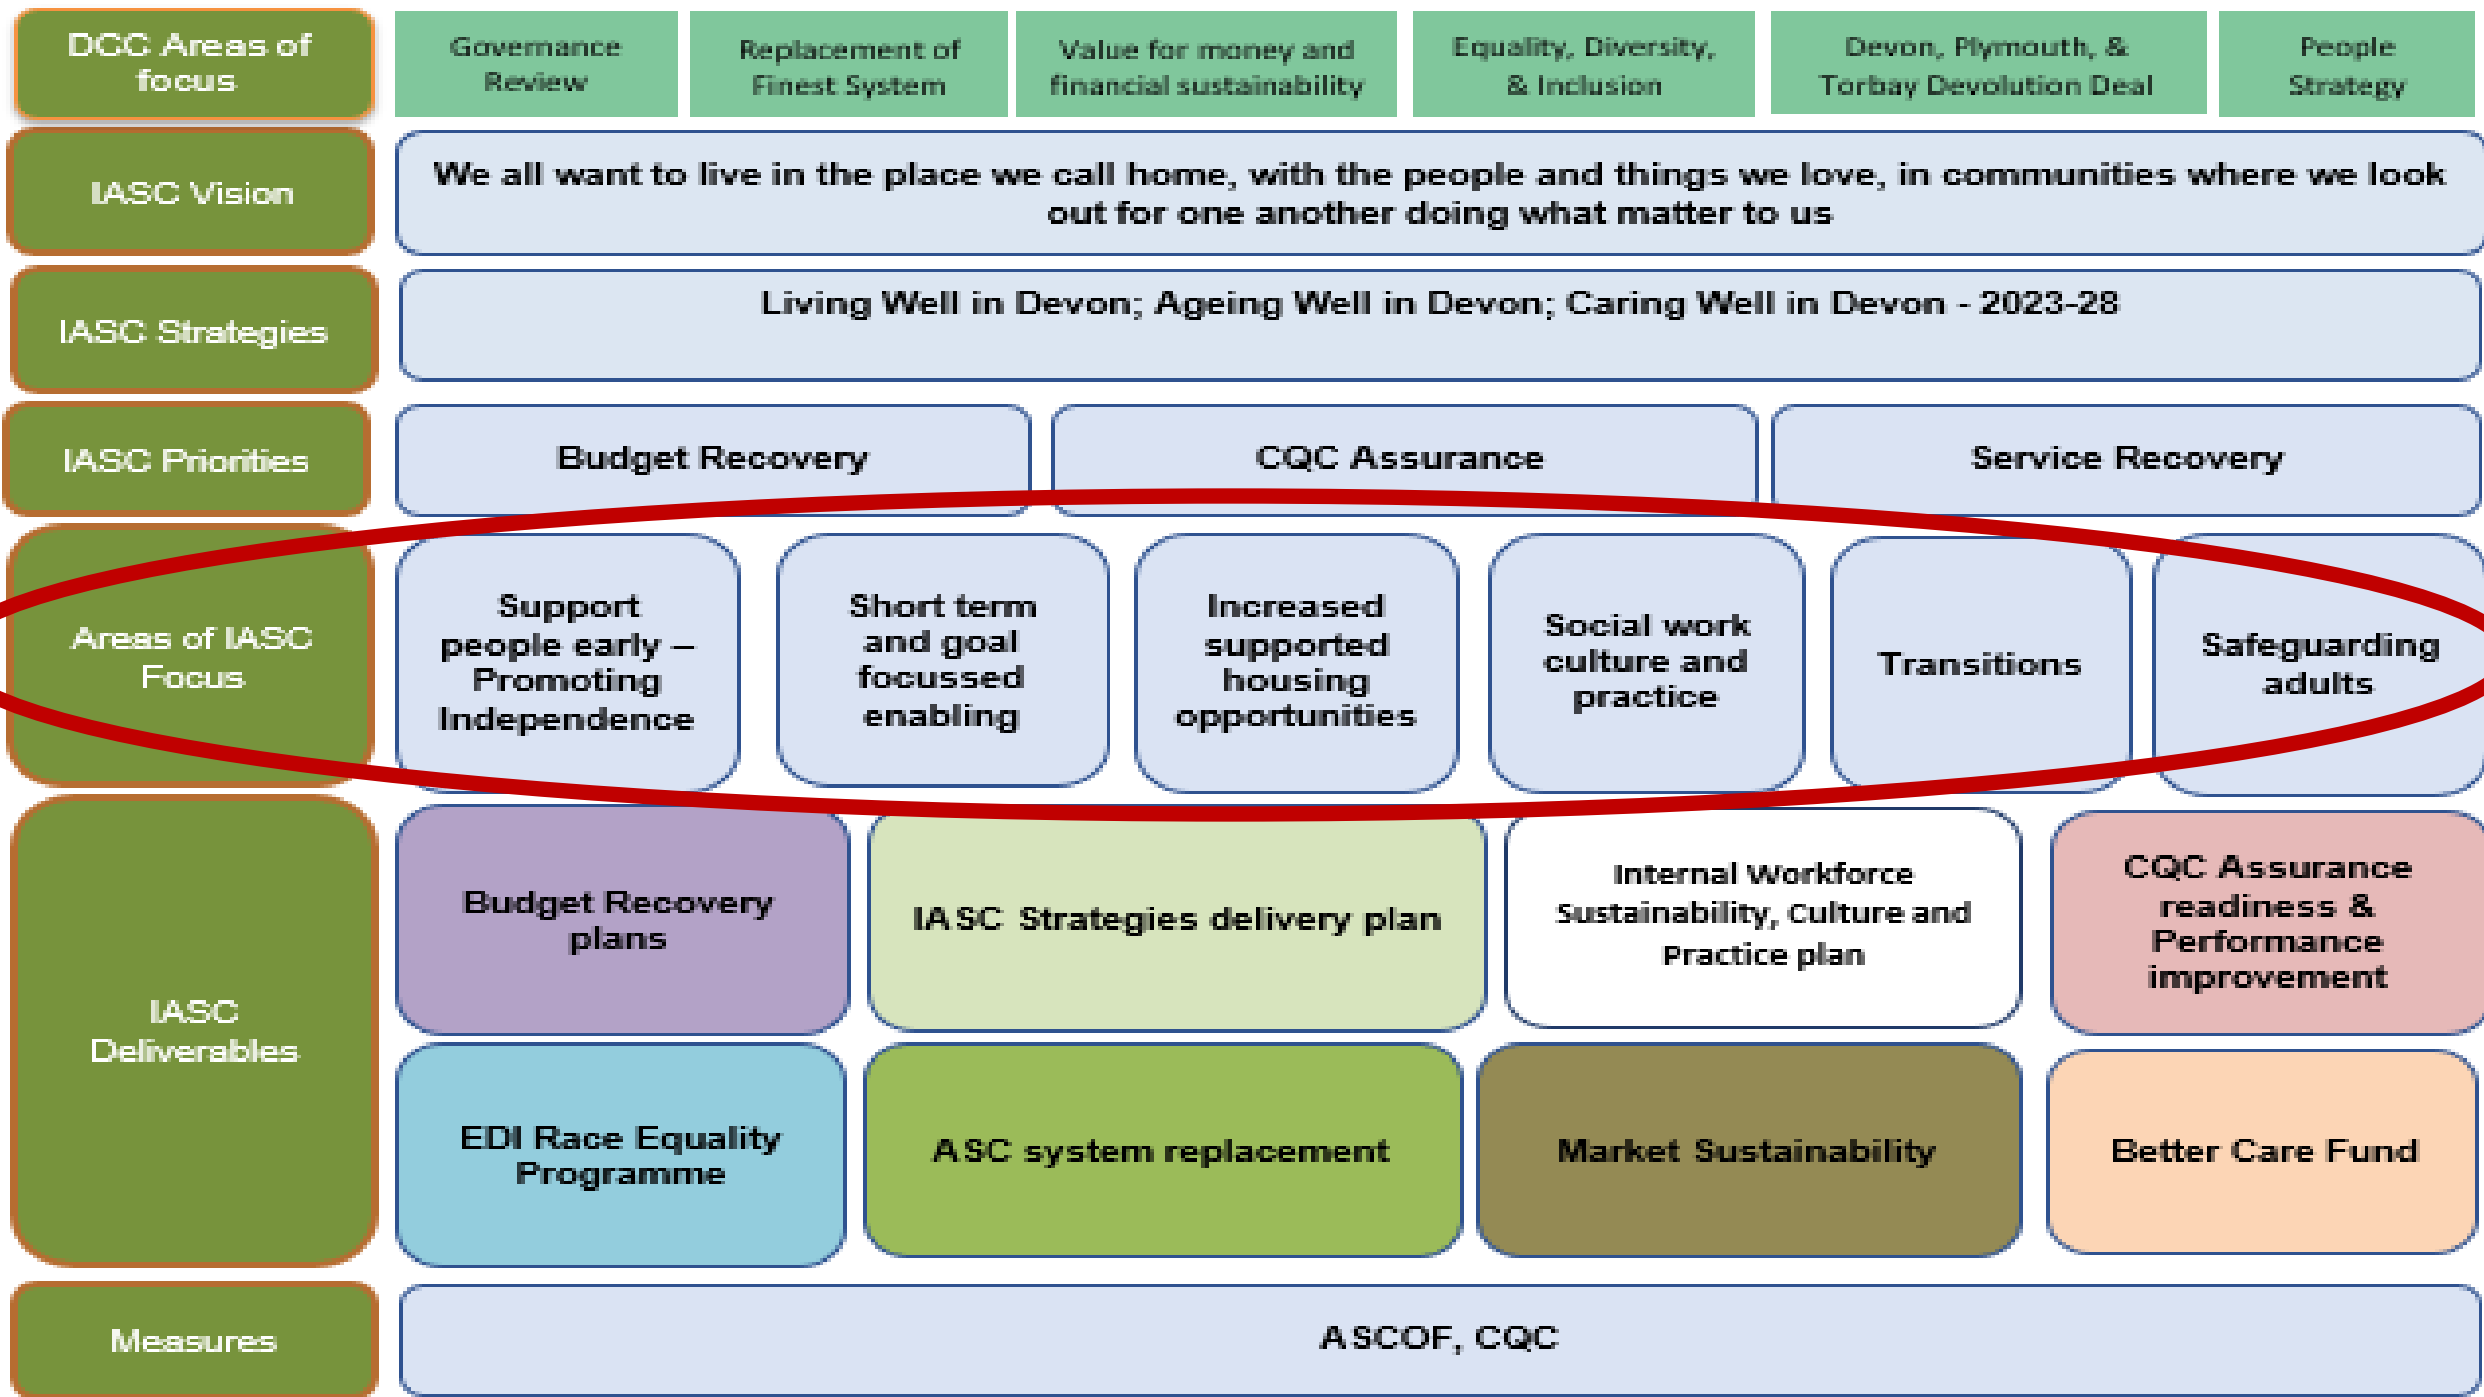

Deputy Director of Integrated Adult Social Care Commissioning

Overview: From promoting independence to living, ageing and caring well

How do our strategies fit within the wider system?

From strategy to delivery - the “how” ...

- Clear communication and buy-in (culture): people need to understand the strategies and the “why”, their role in achieving them, and have the support to do so
- Collaboration and partnership (relationships): Collaborate and co-produce to leverage collective expertise, resources, and knowledge.
- Robust implementation plan (embed): Develop comprehensive implementation plans that outline specific actions, timelines, responsibilities, and performance indicators for each strategy.
- Continuous evaluation and monitoring: Regularly evaluate progress, gather feedback, and monitor the impact of the strategies to ensure they remain aligned with evolving needs

“When organised well, social care helps to weave the web of relationships and support in our local communities that we can draw on to live our lives in the way that we want to, with meaning, purpose and connection, whatever our age or stage of life.”

A vision for the future of social care \(socialcarefuture.org.uk\)

Next steps? For discussion...

- A Strategic partnership approach
- A “Market Position Statement” for the community sector:
 - a statement of what we understand to be the need
 - informed by conversations with the sector
 - a systematic gathering of evidence both of how the sector sees the world and what they can offer.
- In such a statement we’d set out
 - What we’d like to see communities do for themselves
 - Where investment (including from big national sources) might best deliver new solutions
 - What our role is including what our strategy is for grant aiding or commissioning